

What will people do?

If AI machines are able to do the work that people currently do?

Alistair Knott

The happy scenario

The happy scenario

- What are the good things people could do, if they didn't need to work?

The happy scenario

- What are the good things people could do, if they didn't need to work?
- Would they do them?

The happy scenario

- What are the good things people could do, if they didn't need to work?
- Would they do them?
- Would people find meaning/satisfaction in these activities if they don't 'have' to do them?

The unhappy scenario

The unhappy scenario

- People who aren't necessary could easily be marginalised or excluded from society.

The unhappy scenario

- People who aren't necessary could easily be marginalised or excluded from society.
- How likely is this to happen?

The unhappy scenario

- People who aren't necessary could easily be marginalised or excluded from society.
- How likely is this to happen?
- Does it depend just on money? Or are other factors involved?